SHORT BIOGRAPHY / PROFILE

Alexander V. Steckelberg is a seasoned project manager and financial markets professional with exceptional analytical skills, experience and methodical knowledge in finance and financial mathematics, information systems, and project management. He has spent the last 10+ years working for a major German bank – very successfully initiating, leading, and managing strategic and operative projects in the financial markets area, and acquiring, developing, directing, and motivating teams of internal employees and external consultants on both the business and IT side.

Dr. Steckelberg has strong inter-cultural skills and a very unique combination of broad expertise and educational background in organizational engineering, project management, risk management and control, business administration, economic sciences, mathematics, statistics, and informatics/computer sciences as well as in business pedagogic/leadership and psychology with emphasis on project leadership and corporate culture establishment and change.

He holds a Magna Cum Laude Ph.D. in business pedagogic/leadership and psychology with emphasis on project leadership and corporate culture development and a Summa Cum Laude Master degree in mathematics (German Dipl.-Math.) as well as a Summa Cum Laude Harzburg Diploma in business administration and economic sciences.

Mr. Steckelberg is certified as a Project Management Professional (PMP) by the Project Management Institute (PMI) and holds various certifications in project management and organizational engineering from world-leading universities. He studied in USA, Russia and Germany, e.g., at Harvard University and Stanford University (USA), State University of Saint Petersburg (Russia), University of Koblenz-Landau and University of Duisburg-Essen (Germany).

He is an AACSB Bridge Program graduate and certified through the AACSB International as Professionally Qualified (PQ) for an academic position at a university or collegiate business school.

Alexander enjoys traveling and learning more about foreign cultures, is a native Russian speaker and also speaks German and English.
